

DECLASSIFIED

WEDNESDAY
JULY 14, 1954

This is Bastille Day and a French public holiday.

Tommy came to the house this morning to tell me of a conversation he had with Cecil Lyon yesterday about a compromise suggested by the British for EDC. This is totally unacceptable and would further delay desired action. We will take this matter up directly with the Department.

Barbie, Herbert, E., Nicky and I went down to Versailles for lunch. The Agars returned to town to go to the theater and we spent the night at La Lanterne.
